

Spotlight on: Framing the argument over futile care

This editorial argues that handling the transition from active to palliative care is indeed a weak point in oncology, and if the cancer community fails to address it, we will leave it open to the accountants to set the agenda on futile care

You can read the full article in Cancer World .