Nominations close 30 April

The European School of Oncology (ESO) is seeking nominations for its annual Best Cancer Reporter Award which honours excellence in cancer journalism. The Award is presented each year to a professional journalist who has made an outstanding contribution to enhancing public understanding about cancer.

2013 Best Cancer Reporter Award winner will receive a prize of €10,000. The runner up will receive €5,000. Special Merit Awards will also be given to journalists who the jury believe have excelled in different areas of cancer journalism. In addition, articles from the award-winning journalists will be published in ESO's Cancer World magazine (www.cancerworld.org)

Do you think that you should be rewarded for your critical and accurate reporting on cancer?

Would you like to nominate a journalist from your country who deserves to be recognised for excellence in cancer journalism?

If so, submit a nomination form to ESO by April 30, 2013.

For full details and a nomination form visit http://www.cancerworld.org/Media/BCRA.html
or contact Corinne Hall +39 02 85 46 45 22
mediaservice@eso.net