How does France maintain its ranking as one of the world leaders in five-year cancer survival? In this Cover Story, the head of France's national cancer institute INCa talks about the benefits of a joined up approach to research and care, the advantages of national priorities, targets and deadlines in raising the quality of care, the value of rapid adoption of innovation… and the need to tackle inequalities in access – one of the tougher challenges.

- Could the rest of us learn something from the French approach to tackling cancer?
- And if so, what
